Some 300 Thousand Men to Get Call to Colors in January

War Department's Call Twice as Large as Was Expected

Washington, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Some 300,000 men, far more than the War Manpower Commission expected to be called, may be tapped by Uncle Sam for military service in January.

WMC had indicated that Army draft requirements would drop sharply after the first of the year, but the War Department has certified a January call twice as large as expected.

As a result, the combined Army-Navy monthly quota will remain at its present level of about 300,000 at least for the first month of 1944. The war department had to increase its January call by more than 50,000 above replacement requirements because of lagging enlistments in the WAC and due to the failure of draft boards to meet their October quotas.

The draft boards' below-standard induction figures were attributed by selective service officials to uncertainty over father draft legislation and consequent reluctance to order pre-Pearl Harbor parents to report. Congress already has passed and sent to the White House legislation placing pre-war fathers at the bottom of the draft pool.

Will Welcome Women
WMC officials were unable to say how the stepped-up Army induction rate would affect fathers. Whether a drop in draft calls can be expected in February depends largely on the ability of draft boards to make up their October quotas by the end of January and on the future of the WAC enlistment drive, they added.

Army officers have expressed satisfaction with the performance of the women soldiers and have indicated they would welcome hundreds of thousands of them, but enlistments to date number only about 60,000.

Disclosure of the new draft requirements came on the heels of a complaint from the Office of War Information that WMC officials were withholding manpower news from the public. OWI Director Elmer Davis, in a memorandum delivered to WMC chief Paul V. McNutt, said the manpower commission has employed a "rather hostile" attitude toward the press.

McNutt told reporters that WMC had not attempted to "control" the press.

Trial of Alleged Whiskey Thieves On

A special panel of 50 petit jurors reported to Judge George C. Dixon in the Lee county Circuit court today when the trial of Thomas Sutton and Art Lewis was begun. The two defendants with Charles Konkrite, Jr., were indicted on a charge of the theft of several cases of whiskey from the Brown Shingle road house, west of Dixon on the Lincoln Highway.

Robinson was released from Alcatraz federal prison two months ago for today's trial. He won a court order for the jury trial on his self-prepared plea that he was not properly represented in 1936 when he pleaded guilty to the kidnap charge here and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

The nearly seven years Robinson already has spent in prison have been lost to him now. If the jury convicts him and recommends the death penalty, he will be hanged. If the jury convicts him and recommends mercy, he can be given any prison sentence up to life but he must begin all over again.

It was apparent that the trial would last into a second day as the work of selecting a jury was started this morning. Attorneys A. G. Harris, John P. Devine and John Buckley were representing two defendants.

Reds Near Zhlobin in Drive to Smash Retreating Nazis

Moscow, Nov. 29.—(AP)—The Red army was advancing rapidly toward the important rail junction of Zhlobin today in a drive along the escape gap northwest of Gomel through which broken German forces were attempting to flee to the west bank of the Dnieper.

Sweeping up 150 villages and seizing many prisoners, Russian troops yesterday pushed to within 20 miles of Zhlobin, a soviet communique said. Meanwhile other Russian forces surged forward to the west and southwest in White Russia and killed 3,800 nazis in heavy fighting extending from the Gomel area to below Dnepropetrovsk.

(The London radio, in a broadcast recorded by CBS, said one soviet spearhead was only 15 miles from Zhlobin.)

The Germans persisted in heavy tank and infantry assaults in the three Ukrainian sectors of Korosten, Cherniakhov and Brusilov, but still had no major gain to show since taking Zhitomir.

(The Berlin radio yesterday claimed the recapture of Korosten, which is 75 miles northwest of Kiev.)

Reds Advance 10 Miles
Gen. Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's White Russian armies plunged ahead toward Zhlobin after capturing Buda-Koshelevskaya on the Gomel-Zhlobin-Minsk railroad nearly 30 miles northwest of Gomel in a single day's advance of 10 miles from Uvarovichi.

Dense forests and deep swamps in this region made the campaign difficult, but the Red army appeared to be advancing as fast as humanly possible against stubborn German resistance. The soviet communique said the Germans were mining roads and dynamiting bridges as they retreated.

The Red army also continued to forge ahead in the Berezina river area to the west, capturing 24 populated places after killing 400 of the German defenders.

STORY OF KIEV

(Editor's Note: How the Red army crossed the Dnieper in the Kiev salient to recapture that queen city of the Ukraine Nov. 6 and how it is supplying forward forces now battling German counterattacks to the west is told in the following story by Associated Press War Correspondent Eddy Gilmore. He is one of a group of American and British correspondents making the first trip to Kiev by any foreigners since the Nazi forces were driven out.)

By EDDY GILMORE

Kiev, Russia, via Moscow, Nov. 28.—(Delayed)—(AP)—The battle of Kiev was more or less a battle of bridges.

When the Russians retreated from Kiev in 1941 they blew up the main bridges across the Dnieper. They were never put back by the Germans as they pressed east of Kiev when they had things going their way.

These permanent bridges then were denied the Red army on its westward push. Soviet engineers constructed temporary bridges across the wide river.

Bombers came and bombed the bridges. Some of them were hit. So were a lot of German bombers. But the engineers kept building more bridges.

Earlier today I went down to the high Kiev cliff and watched American vehicles come over these bridges.

Lt. Col. Nikolai Valodin of the First Ukrainian Front Engineering Corps stood on the bank with me and explained:

"In this battle of supply, the Red army sprang a surprise on the Germans by its sudden crossing north of the city. We crossed the river and put up biggest battles north of the city because we didn't want to destroy our Ukrainian capital any more than was needed."

City Not Shelled
Valodin explained that when the Red army drew up under Kiev's cliffs soviet riflemen, snipers and machine-guns raked the cliffs where the Germans were dug in but did not shell the city.

We turned toward the Kiev central bridge. Just like the one I crossed over north of the city, it is made of pontoons and of hand-heaved pine.

"We captured lots of those pontoons from the Germans at the Don," said the young engineer, who speaks English with an Oxford accent.

He called my attention to a caravan of trucks and said, "You gave us those."

They were American trucks—a long line plodding along bearing extra heavy loads.

Germans Surprised
He said the Russian's main crossings north of Kiev so surprised the Germans that they were not able to switch large forces there in time.

Full Destruction of Berlin is Possible, Nazis Acknowledge

Goebbels' Threats of Reprisals Fail to Stop Aid Raids

LONDON, Nov. 29.—(AP)—American heavy bombers supported by fighters attacked targets in northwest Germany today on the heels of an overnight attack on western Germany by the RAF.

While the American heavy bombers were continuing the stepped up, big scale destruction of German war centers, twin-engined American Maubauds also streaked out over the channel today to blast at Hitler's air power in a raid on the Nazi airfield at Chievres, in Belgium.

The blows directed against Germany both last night and today were in bold defiance of German threats of reprisals for last week's attacks on Berlin, said to have left a third of the Nazi capital in ruins.

Stockholm, Nov. 29.—(AP)—The Germans acknowledged today the possibility that British and American bombers might completely destroy Berlin, one third of which already is reported in ruins as the result of heavy RAF raids during the past week.

The admission was made by George Schroeder, chief correspondent of the Europa Press, who writes only with the specific approval of Nazi Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels.

In a story designed for foreign consumption, Schroeder said grimly that the British already have "won the first round in the battle of Berlin," declared that the allies may "lay all Berlin in waste" and added that "we may expect other

Biddle Is Critical of Governor Dewey

Washington, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Attorney General Francis Biddle advised Gov. Thomas E. Dewey today that President Roosevelt would be asked to commute a federal prison sentence against Louis (Lepke) Buchalter as soon as New York state has indicated readiness to carry out a death sentence against the man.

Buchalter, convicted of murder in a state court in connection with the operations of "Murder, Inc.," now is serving a 14-year federal term on a narcotics charge.

In a sharply critical letter to Dewey, Biddle said that "statements and implications in your public announcements that we (the justice department) are openly resisting your efforts to have Buchalter's death sentence executed are totally unwarranted."

Biddle said his attention had been drawn to the governor's "recent press announcements to the effect that the president has failed to make Louis Buchalter available to the authorities of the state of New York to be dealt with in accordance with law."

"It is surprising to me," Biddle wrote, "that you should choose to communicate with the president or with me in this important matter through the medium of the press."

Dewey is on a vacation in Georgia and his office had no comment today.

Navy Has "Ocean Full" of Carriers and Ships to Carry War to Japan

Southwest Pacific Allied Headquarters, Nov. 29.—(AP)—The United States had only a single aircraft carrier in the Pacific a year ago, and that one was badly damaged, Vice Admiral Thomas C. Kinkaid disclosed today.

Compared with that picture, the new commander of allied naval forces in the Southwest Pacific said the Navy now has an "ocean full" of carriers and ships to carry forward any attacks on Japan's island defenses.

(Secretary of the Navy Knox announced in Washington last week that the United States Fleet has been doubled in 11 months with the construction of 419 new ships, and has 817 fighting ships, including 40 aircraft carriers.)

Montgomery Starts New Offensive in Dark Sunday Morn

BULLETIN

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Thirteen United States Army nurses have been missing since Nov. 8 when a transport plane in which they were flying from Africa to the east coast of Italy overshot its destination in bad weather.

The last word from the plane was a message received while it presumably was over the Adriatic. It never arrived at the allied field.

The nurses were attached to an air evacuation unit. The next of kin have been notified.

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Nov. 29.—(AP)—The Eighth Army, called upon by Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery to hit the Germans a "colossal crack" and to drive them from Rome, struck in a new offensive in the darkness of Sunday morning from its Sangro bridgeheads and is making good progress in the face of enemy flame-throwers, allied headquarters announced today.

The attack, delivered at night in typical Montgomery style, was preceded and backed by a terrific air onslaught. It was carried out by veteran British, Indian and New Zealand divisions rushing forward in the flashing light of an "exceptionally heavy" artillery barrage.

Before the Eighth Army's wheels were set churning westward from the bridgehead into the enemy's hill positions toward Rome, British destroyers laid down a bombardment of the enemy port of Civitanova, 20 miles south of Ancona on the Adriatic coast.

A second bridgehead at Archi, 13 miles inland from the Adriatic, was hammered out as the attack progressed, broadening the Eighth Army's foothold on the north side of the most serious obstacle encountered by Montgomery since he set foot on the Calabrian toe last September.

To the southwest, a British cruiser and destroyer also hurled broadsides into the Minturno area just north of the Fifth Army's front.

Americans in the right of Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's front also seized more high ground in an important advance and broke up determined German counterthrusts.

Four Murders, Suicide in Philadelphia Today

Philadelphia, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Two real estate men were shot to death in a real estate office today and a few minutes later two women employees of a Y. M. C. A. were shot and killed by a man who committed suicide.

Police said they believed the same man was responsible for all four killings.

The real estatemen killed were David Finke, 52, and Sam Clokey. The YMCA employees, both Negroes, were Miss Mae Chappell, 29, and Mrs. Nora Harley, 26. They were shot in a YMCA building.

The gunman was not immediately identified.

Herbert Silver, who lives nearby, told police he was talking to Clokey when he heard shots—"five or six"—over the telephone. "While the shots were sounding, I heard a voice crying: 'No! Don't! don't!'" Silver said.

Silver notified police, who went to the office and found Dinke sprawled on the floor in the center of the room and Clokey lying behind a desk.

Probable Sinking of Japanese Cruiser on Friday is Reported

2,000 Nipponese Killed on Bougainville; Week End in Pacific Busy

(By The Associated Press)

The probable sinking of a Japanese cruiser, reports of 2,000 enemy dead on Bougainville island and intensified aerial activity highlighted a busy week-end in the Southwest Pacific theater of war while construction crews moved into the newly-won Gilberts to the northeast.

A Liberator heavy bomber patrolling St. George channel between New Britain and New Ireland islands Friday night dropped a 1,000-pound bomb squarely on the Jap cruiser, Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported.

The bomb pierced the ship's armor and exploded inside with a flash that lighted up the night sky. It was the 49th enemy warship sunk or damaged in the northern Solomons during November.

A spokesman for Adm. William F. Halsey, South Pacific Fleet commander, reported that more than 1,000 Japanese had been killed in a 10-day battle on Bougainville, invaded at Empress Augusta Bay by U. S. Marines Nov. 1. This, he said, brought to 2,000 the number of enemy dead in fighting for that larger of the Solomon islands. Our dead and wounded combined, including casualties among Army troops which have reinforced the Marines, were given as 1,000.

Extensive Aerial Assaults
Allied bombers carried out their most extensive operations in weeks. Those of Admiral Halsey's wing alone dropped close to 200 tons of bombs, without interception. Eight key Japanese positions were assaulted.

Liberators left 105 tons of bombs on enemy installations on Buka island just off the northern tip of Bougainville, and Mitchell mediums followed with bombing and strafing.

Buin, at the southeastern tip of Bougainville, took a 71-ton bombing from torpedo and dive bombers.

A heavy force of Mitchells, covered by Lightning fighters, made a low-level attack on the Wewak and Boram airfields in north-eastern New Guinea, destroying at least five aircraft on the ground and damaging some 25 others. Beaufort attackers hit Rabaul in force and reported a heavy concentration of planes at that New Britain stronghold.

Five Barges Sunk
Speedy P-T boats sank five barges loaded with 200 Japanese troops and artillery in Vitiaz Strait, between New Guinea and New Britain.

No ground action was reported on Bougainville, where the Americans have extended their beachhead by a painful yard-by-yard advance, and on New Guinea, where the Australians, with tank support, have taken Sattelberg and its high plateau overlooking the possible invasion channel to New Britain.

THE WAR TODAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

Whether the all-out bombing of Berlin and the land offensives in Russia and Italy presage some great allied diplomatic move to try to force capitulation of the axis, as London and other capitals seem to think, there's small doubt that we are witnessing the death of Berlin—the first city of its size thus to perish.

Destruction of the German Capital from the air will be a military and psychological coup unique in war. Smaller cities have been wiped out, but nothing approaching this vast metropolis of four millions.

Today for the first time the Hitlerites admit that British and American bombers may "lay all Berlin waste". George Schroeder, chief correspondent of Europa Press, who writes under Nazi Propaganda Minister Joe Goebbels' direction, minces no words in conceding the grim prospect.

The devil himself, being about ready to exact the price for the bill of goods he sold henchman Hitler, must have smiled grimly, advising the people of the stricken city how to write their last wills and testaments.

When you stop to think about it, that's one of the most remarkable

Muscataine, Ia., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Chief of Police Mark Taylor said today a charge of petty larceny had been filed against Clarence Secrist, Muscatine florist, for allegedly stealing wreaths from cemetery graves. Secrist is at liberty under $100 bond.

Taylor said complaints of graves being molested had been frequent for several months and investigation led to the arrest of Secrist late Saturday.

Police found a large box of wreaths ready for shipment from Secrist to an Indiana address, Taylor said. Other wreaths were found at his home. Secrist contended all the wreaths had been made in his shop, but the officer said some of them were identified by persons who said they had bought them at other florist shops and had placed them on graves.

Ickes Urges Speed in Negotiations for Satisfactory Miners' Contract

Washington, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Secretary Ickes urged speed on soft coal operators and miners today in their negotiations for a wage contract.

Appearing before a joint meeting of union and management representatives, the government custodian of the seized pits made a vigorous appeal for a national contract to assure peace in the industry and bring about restoration of the mines to their owners.

Ickes' call for action came while John L. Lewis maneuvered to overcome the opposition of southern operators to a portal-to-portal contract, or to split their forces.

The secretary of the interior also announced termination of

Hull Views Rumors of Peace Moves as Inspired by Enemy

Sees Stories Put Out in Effort to Impair "Vigor" of Allies

Washington, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Secretary of State Hull said today that the current crop of peace rumors apparently are put out to impair the "vigor" of the allied war effort by creating over-confidence.

In response to a press conference question, "have you any information that would support rumors that a German peace move is afoot either through the Vatican or other channels?" the secretary replied:

"I think I would be safe in authorizing you to quote me entirely in the negative about such rumors at every day's conference until I notify you to the contrary."

Seven Years Spent in Prison Wasted?

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Willingness to recommend the death penalty was made a condition for service on the federal court jury being selected here today to try Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., on kidnap charges to which he once pleaded guilty and served nearly seven years of a life sentence.

The 36-year-old former Nashville, Tenn. resident again is charged with kidnapping Mrs. Berry V. Stoll of Louisville in 1934 and holding her at Indianapolis, Ind., until he had collected $50,000 ransom.

Robinson was released from Alcatraz federal prison two months ago for today's trial. He won a court order for the jury trial on his self-prepared plea that he was not properly represented in 1936 when he pleaded guilty to the kidnap charge here and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

The nearly seven years Robinson already has spent in prison have been lost to him now. If the jury convicts him and recommends the death penalty, he will be hanged. If the jury convicts him and recommends mercy, he can be given any prison sentence up to life but he must begin all over again.

It was apparent that the trial would last into a second day as the work of selecting a jury was started this morning. Attorneys A. G. Harris, John P. Devine and John Buckley were representing two defendants.

Reinhardt Stahl of this city was assessed a fine of $10 and costs on a charge of disorderly conduct preferred by Deputy Sheriff Henry Wilson in Justice J. O. Shaulis' court today. Stahl was arrested about 1:15 o'clock Sunday morning when Sheriff L. E. Bates and Deputy Wilson were hurriedly summoned to the Airport Grill east of the city on the Lincoln Highway, where it was reported that several of the patrons were involved in a fight. The other participants had left the scene before the officers arrived.

Pavements Are Slippery—

A heavily loaded gasoline transport truck, driven by Orville R. Cooper of Peru, stalled on Galena avenue near Second street Sunday night about 11 o'clock. The slippery snow covered paving was responsible for the failure of the heavy, loaded truck to negotiate the hill and at the corner of Second street, the driver attempted to turn west on Second street. The tires skidded and the truck struck a parked car belonging to Deane Nussbaum, rural route 4, which was damaged only slightly. It was some time before ashes were hauled to the scene and the gasoline transport was able to pull away from the curbing. The first real snow of the season rendered the Galena avenue hill from River street to south of Second street dangerous early this morning. Several cars had difficulty negotiating the grade until the street department workers arrived and sprinkled ashes on the slick surface.

Rambler

Chicago, Nov. 29—(AP)—Melvin Harris doesn't like horses that trample thunderously on his front porch and try to get in the house.

So when a horse tried that stunt last night, Harris became indignant, pushed the animal back on the lawn, and called police. He explained to them the horse was a frequent visitor but usually had confined itself to cropping the lawn.

"That horse ought to be locked up," he complained to Officers Lester Wright and Frank Hubert, "he's liable to kick someone's house over."

So the patrolmen browsed around until they located the horse's owner, Donald Lee.

"Yes sir, that's my horse," Lee admitted. "His name is Dick or Fred; he answers to both. I bought him last March and he pulls my express wagon. He plowed a lot of war gardens, too."

The officers explained an uncoordinated horse constituted a nuisance, and Lee offered regrets. Suddenly Officer Wright looked around and queried, "Where did that horse get to?"

It was in Lee's kitchen.

it shifted the bridges near the center of the city.

I rode back to the hotel. The endless procession of trucks still was going by.

After dinner and all through the night I was awakened several times by shouts of drivers and the grinding of gears. The trucks kept moving westward.

The trucks were not all that went westward—all through the night I heard the slug-slug of soldiers' feet and often their Red army songs as they moved up into battle.

Tanks galore were going past. Sometimes Red army men were riding atop them. All were hurrying.

Off to the west there is thunder and rumbling but you have a safe feeling that it won't get any closer. The Red army is sending too much stuff into the salient to let that happen.

London, Nov. 29—(AP)—Yugoslav guerrillas are continuing to advance on Stokac, about 25 miles inland from Metkovic in Herzegovina, and are repulsing German attacks in Montenegro, headquarters of Gen. Josip Broz (Tito) announced today.

The communique, broadcast by the Free Yugoslav radio, said heavy fighting was taking place in Serbia, while in Bosnia German transport lines were attacked, resulting in numerous nazi casualties.

fect in significant degree the serious inflationary dangers that face us x x x as long as the war shall last, and in the postwar period.

"It is a great fallacy to suppose that we can fight history's greatest war to save what we hold most dear without financial sacrifice. Inevitably we shall experience much greater financial sacrifice than we have thus far. Taxation now, during the war, is the easiest way to make that sacrifice."

The secretary reiterated his warning of an inflationary threat which he said is inherent in the estimated $36,000,000,000 surplus between national income after payment of taxes and the available supply of goods.

use it. With feeble-minded, hand-training is very necessary. Occupational therapy is one of the oldest treatments known to man."

She remarked that happiness is attained by the extent of our ability to adjust to our handicaps, and this is particularly true among these patients.

Mrs. Marcellus brought an exhibit of much of the work done by the different groups, and explained that by learning to do these things with their hands, many need not be entirely dependent upon society for their support. The exhibit consisted of knitted pieces, woven rugs, brushes, toys, etc., and all were beautifully made. Some of these things are kept for exhibits. Others are used in the cottages giving them a home-like touch.

Dr. Murray said he hoped the institution would grow no larger as it is almost unwieldy now with 4,274 patients. His wish is to have smaller cottages, with better conditions for all, putting the welfare of the individual ahead of the thought of too rigid economy. Mrs. Marcellus, too, is eager to have the time when home economics may be taught to the brighter patients.

Before the meeting, the afternoon's speakers and Mrs. Murray were luncheon guests of the public welfare committee at The Coffee House.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by the hostess committee, whose chairwoman was Mrs. Philip Reilly. Her assistants were Mrs. G. P. Powell, Mrs. L. B. Potter, Mrs. W. W. Surprise

Roodhouse, Ill., Nov. 29—(AP)—Somewhere in England Staff Sgt. Perry A. Nebergall is wondering today whether he has one or five children.

Before he left for overseas duty last May, he arranged a code with his wife, Marion, to circumvent the cable censorship. "If it's a boy," he told her, "send me this," and he pressed a $10 bill into her hand, "but if it's a girl, send this," handing her a $20.

In due time a boy, Virgil Arthur, was born to Mrs. Nebergall, and true to her promise she cabled her husband.

"It's all very simple," she explained. "I cabled him so he'd know everything was all right and because it was so close to Christmas I made it an even $50 just as a surprise."

German cities to meet the same fate."

Schroeder added darkly, however, that Germany intended to pay back Britain soon with reprisals by employing a new weapon which, he said, "may make total war much more total."

Britain, he said, could not use a similar weapon because she does not possess bases close enough to Germany—thus indicating the nazis intend to use their weapon from France.

This might mean that it is some new type of cannon or rocket projectile. It has been rumored that the Germans are experimenting with both.

Schroeder said the "battle of Berlin will be recorded in history as the turning point in the war". But he declared that "it already can be seen England can never win the land war by air raids."

Berlin's transportation and food distribution systems and water and power facilities, meanwhile, were reported still paralyzed from last week's massive RAF bombings.

able little news dispatches to come out of the war. It certainly is close to being a gesture of desperation which fits well with the declaration by Britain's two-fisted bomber chief, Air Marshal Sir Arthur Harris, that the holocaust which is sweeping the German Capital is "the last lap of the race".

But we mustn't conclude from all this that the end is at hand. Air Marshal Harris, whom I know from personal acquaintance to be far-sighted and logical, doesn't claim this. He just says it's the last lap, and doesn't predict how long the lap will be. Berlin is to be bombed until it is dead.

Would the death of Berlin mean the end of the war? Not necessarily, but it's difficult to see how the German machine could keep going long with its Capital smashed—for Berlin, quite apart from sentiment, is literally the heart of the Reich. It not only is one of the greatest industrial areas in the country, but it's the hub of the European railway system. Cripple Berlin and you've thrown a monkey-wrench into Hitler's entire continental set-up.

Likely revenge will be attempted by the Hitlerites, and they may indeed have a new "secret weapon" which they boast. I think we should also be prepared to see the reprisals take some barbaric form. However, the Germans no longer have within their power any reprisal which would win them the war, no matter how devilish the revenge might be.

The Tokyo radio today broadcast a Japanese imperial headquarters communique acknowledging loss of contact with Japanese forces on Tarawa and Makin islands in the Gilberts which have been captured by United States troops.

The broadcast, recorded by U. S. government monitors, said "details concerning the situation on Tarawa and Makin islands at present are not clear due to no dispatch or communique from our garrison on the said islands". The Japanese have not yet conceded loss of the islands in either home or overseas broadcasts.

The Tokyo radio also asserted that a Japanese submarine and naval planes had sunk four aircraft carriers and two cruisers and "heavily damaged" another aircraft carrier in the Gilberts area between Nov. 25 and 27. The claim was utterly without allied confirmation.

JAPS BEATEN BACK

Chungking, Nov. 29—(AP)—Japanese forces who have been attempting to seize the vital city of Changteh, gateway to Changsha, have been beaten back and are retreating in disorder, fragmentary reports reaching here said today.

The Japanese have hurled waves of infantry at the city, supported by continuous artillery fire and air bombardment. The Chinese defenders fought back stubbornly.

The Chinese high command said more than 2,000 of the invaders were wiped out Friday after they charged behind clouds of poison gas. All their attacks yesterday also were repulsed.

Another 2,000 Japanese were reported killed near Tzeli, northwest of Changteh, and it was said the enemy was evacuating the town of Taoyuan, southwest of the besieged city.

Kansas City — Miss Lucinda Barnett, 21, and Miss Lorene C. Stimac, 32, made what they believed were attractive ensembles of blouses, caps, jackets and slacks, they said, and wore them on a trip to a movie last night.

The girls were hauled to police headquarters instead, where Roger West, chief petty officer of the Navy shore patrol, released them after a word of friendly advice: Don't wear those outfits again.

The clothes, he said, were mistaken for Navy uniforms, which no one but sailors are permitted to wear.

THE government and various organizations have done almost unbelievable things to get these people home. For instance, if they didn't have money of their own sufficient for the trip they could write out a promissory note to the government for the amount they would need for transportation, incidentals and some personal needs. Fare was fixed at $525 with an additional $50 for incidentals and they could draw up to the amount of $90 per adult for personal needs. They may pay this back after arriving or relatives and friends may deposit the amount now.

WHEN the Gripsholm left the United States almost three months ago it was loaded with all kinds of comforts and necessities for the civilian and military prisoners in internment camps. The Red Cross shipped 140,000 food packages which contained four pounds of concentrated meats and fish, including corned-beef; pork luncheon meat, liver paste and salmon. Also, in each package there was one pound of army butter spread, two tins of nescafe, one-half pound of sugar, two bars of soap, Army ration chocolate bars, ascorbic acid tablets, powdered soup, bouillon cubes, jam and eight packages of cigarettes. Each person was to receive five of these thirteen-pound packages.

NOW back to the repatriates who are arriving soon in New York. There are so many little details involved in a trip like that which the average citizen would never think of, but which are almost routine work for the Red Cross and similar organizations. Five nurses, four doctors and a recreational director were provided to help with the passengers. A list of names of other people whom friends have asked about was sent to the steamer at Rio with requests that anyone knowing any of these people might contact relatives after landing.

WHEN they reach New York they must be officially cleared from the steamer and away from the pier before relatives and friends may contact them. The Red Cross will man an information desk just outside the customs barrier and will handle such things as last minute messages from relatives and friends about where they will be.

THE Red Cross Motor Corps will be on hand to take these internees to nearby hotels or organization headquarters where they may call or meet their friends. Arrangements have been made with the leading stores in New York to have special clerks look after the needs of these people and thus avoid the Christmas shoppers rush. Ration books and extra shoe stamps will be issued as they dock. Free stenographic service is even offered.

DIXON WOMAN'S CLUB HEARS DR. WARREN G. MURRAY AT THEIR MEETING SATURDAY

An even hundred members and a few guests of the Dixon Woman's club met Saturday, at 2 o'clock at the Loveland Community House, for the regular bi-monthly meeting. After the call to order, by the president, Miss Esther Barton, the pledge of allegiance to the flag was given. Mrs. B. Chasteen, chairman of the music and radio committee, led the group in the singing of "America," and "God Bless Our Native Land."

Mrs. E. V. Mellott, war service committee chairman, brought to the attention of club members, the work of her group, and showed a lovely woolen afghan which was knitted and donated to the Red Cross by a club-member, Mrs. H. W. Lipman. All who will do so, were requested to help in knitting other afghans.

A scrap-book for soldiers, compiled by her young son, was shown by Mrs. Z. Glatter, and she requested that all others making scrap-books should turn them in to some member of the War Service committee soon.

Mrs. N. W. Dietrich reported $110,000 realized from the Woman's club bake sale. This money is to be used for public welfare.

Mrs. F. G. Eno announced that Mrs. F. L. Blewfield will give a review of the book "The Little Locksmith," for club members and friends, next Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 at the Loveland Community House.

Press and Publicity Chairman, Mrs. Wilbur Fuls, explained that the title "Christmas Coze" given to the December 11th meeting was to be just what the name implied—a cozy get-together with several departments uniting to give a most interesting Christmas program.

The main speaker of the afternoon, Dr. Warren Murray, was introduced by Mrs. R. J. Finley, chairman of the public welfare committee. He gave a very interesting and comprehensive talk

ARMY NURSE NOW

It's 2nd Lieut. Jeanne Hart of the Army Nurses' Corps now for the daughter of Mrs. Wilbur D. Hart of 510 East Fellows street.

Lt. Hart graduated last June 16 from Northwestern university after completing a two and a half years of university training, and two and a half years of training at Evanston hospital. She will now take basic training for about five or six weeks at McCoy, Sparta, Wisc., and will then be assigned to a new post. Lt. Hart left Dixon this morning for Sparta.

on the work of the Dixon State hospital. Dr. Murray has been associated with the hospital for 23 years, and had several years of institutional work previous to that, so his wide experience in this field qualified him to speak most effectively on the subject. Every club member present received "A Handbook of Information," compiled in 1941 by Dr. Murray, and this booklet presents in detail the things of which he spoke. It was particularly interesting to get an insight into the work that is being done among the three classes of patients, feeble-minded, epileptics and 58 chronic-sleeping cases (post encephalitis) cared for at this institution.

Dr. Murray introduced Mrs. Elsie Marcellus, who is in charge of the occupational therapy work there, and she talked of her work. Among other things she said, "All institution patients have a niche of usefulness and are taught to

Mrs. Paul Harnes, her two daughters, Mrs. Fred Reents of Sterling, and Miriam Harnes, and Mrs. Reents' daughter, Judy, spent their Thanksgiving holiday at Peoria visiting Mrs. Harnes' son, Gail, who is at Bradley Tech studying under ASTP. Their celebration was a double one for Gail was celebrating a birthday also.

Dixon Soldier Is Wed to Chicago Girl Thanksgiving

On Thanksgiving afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, Miss Genevieve Madey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Topp of Chicago, became the bride of Pfc. Judson Carey Richards, son of Mrs. R. J. Richards of Dixon. The wedding took place in the beautiful McCauley chapel of the First Baptist church of Evanston, Ill., with the Rev. Chas. Heimsath, D. D., officiating. The bridegroom's father was formerly co-pastor and religious education director of this church.

Miss Frances Madey, sister of the bride, was the bride's maid of honor and Floyd Anderson of Oak Park served as best man for the groom.

The bride wore a French blue neeplepoint rayon afternoon dress with contrasting fusia hat and accessories. Her corsage was of pink and white sweetheart roses, and her only jewelry was a jeweled pin, a gift of the bridegroom. Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served to the wedding party and guests at the home of the bride's parents. After a brief wedding trip, Pvt. and Mrs. Richards will be at home in Mt. Clemens, Mich., near Selfridge Field, where the groom is in the personnel section of the administrative department of the Fourth Air Base squadron.

General Patton in Dutch

Judging by reports, American public opinion will weigh heavily in the decision on what to do with Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, who went temperamentally off the beam and struck an enlisted man who he suspected of feigning shell shock.

In the last war there were some soldiers unable to meet the realities of battle and escaped in one way or another. There were some who deliberately wounded themselves; others pretended various ailments, including shell shock. It was hard at the time to distinguish between a genuine case of shock and a pretended one.

Human nature being what it is, it is fair to assume that in this war, too, there are some soldiers emotionally and temperamentally unable to face the actualities of the battlefield. They are too loyal to desert, so they become apparently ill. We believe some mental experts will say some malingerers actually believe they are ill.

General Patton may have been informed of some such cases. He may have decided to do something about the next one he saw. He visits a hospital and sees a man who has no disease and no wounds, but still is not fighting. He decides to make an example. But alas! He has picked the wrong man. This man actually has shell shock according to the judgment of competent medical men. So the general becomes the horrible example and the soldier becomes the subject of public sympathy. The officer apologizes to the soldier and to the Army in general.

The decision as to Patton's future rightly rests with General Eisenhower or the latter's superiors.

In principle, there are few instances in which an Army officer is justified in using strong-arm methods in dealing with soldiers. Officers have been known to use violence to overcome a bad situation in which a whole Army unit is endangered by a single man's behavior. The officer is permitted to defend himself if attacked, or to use his own judgment in case of mutiny. In other matters the officer doesn't strike a soldier because the soldier doesn't dare defend himself—or even make an argument unless asked for an explanation of his conduct. To strike a man who can't hit back is equivalent to hitting a man when he is down.

But who is it that never makes an error of judgment? If the public is asked to judge, then let the judgment be made by those civilians who never have lost their own tempers nor become unduly excited in moments of great responsibility. The soldier himself might be consulted in the matter. If he is willing to forgive, his attitude might influence the rest of us.

If we were asked for a suggestion (and we have not been asked) we would propose that in the future General Patton, if he keeps his command, should delegate a competent psychiatrist to pass judgment on cases of shell shock.

No one ever climbs to real success merely by being boosted up the family tree.

When it comes to bankrolls, "roll your own" is a nice motto—if you roll it into war bonds!

CHAPTER XXV

MRS. EDGAR had ways . . . and means. Mrs. Edgar expected to be chairman of the board during the coming year. The present chairman wished to retire, Mrs. Edgar could bring influence to bear. The organization would not willingly dismiss a trusted and valuable nurse but in order to keep the peace, which meant its very lifeblood, it might see fit to remove her, and to see, in compensation, that she obtained a like position in another city.

Frank was remembering this, sitting on the porch with Emily.

"Just what is it she's to get over?" Emily demanded.

He said uncomfortably: "That business about typhoid in the mill district and the houses on Elderberry street."

"If you were half a man," she said with energy, "you'd look into things for yourself. You're supposed to hold a responsible position in the mills and you'll inherit the Elderberry block eventually."

He said, "But look here, Emily . . ."

"Oh, I know. None of my business . . . said furiously. It pleases your mother to dominate welfare boards in this town, to give large sums of money publicly . . . she could expend the same sums on bettering the conditions of her employees and her tenants but she'd get no publicity, I suppose."

He took her hands and held them fast. He said, eagerly:

"If you'll marry me . . . I swear it, Emily, I'll see you have everything you want. What if she does cut up rough at first? It won't be for long. I'm her only child. We can slip away and—"

"Oh," said Emily, "so I'm not to have a church wedding? She's told you that you aren't to marry me, has she?"

It's a Tough War

If anyone thinks that this isn't a tough war as compared with World War I, a booklet titled "Care of the Wounded," released by the Office of War Information, should dispel the notion. Outright deaths in battle are greater among total battle casualties in all three services, and mental cases have increased in spite of the great advances in neuropsychiatric treatment during the past 25 years.

In the last war, one soldier was killed to every six wounded. In this war, one is killed to every three wounded. In World War I, one sailor was killed for every two-plus wounded. This time it is one to every one-plus wounded. Among the Marines the ratio was one to five in the last war, one to four in this.

The rate of admission of neuropsychiatric cases to Army hospitals in the last war was about 30 for every 100 cases in the continental United States, and less than 20 in overseas hospitals. In the present war the figure is about 50 for every 1,000 cases in this country, and slightly higher in overseas theaters.

Greater destructive power of ordnance, greater fire power and less fighting from stabilized and prepared positions are the reasons advanced for the higher ratio of killed to wounded in the present conflict. As for the increase in mental cases, many understandable reasons are listed.

American forces fought largely from fixed trench positions in World War I except from September to November, 1918, when they went on the offensive. Trench warfare was no picnic, but it did afford them greater protection than today's soldier usually has, and hot food could frequently be brought up. There was also the chance for men at the front to get periodic leave, when they could get back to Paris or other French cities and forget the war for a while.

Today our armies are almost continuously on the offensive. In place of a trench, they have the protection of a fox hole, a rock or a tree. They land on beaches blasted by enemy fire. They fight jungle and insects as well as Japs and Germans. There is little hot food, and no leaves in Paris. They have to keep moving. And all this adds up to greater strain, greater danger, greater anxiety, and more mental breakdowns.

These figures give an idea of the price that our men are paying for coming victory. But there is a cheerful side to the report, too. That is in the lowered percentage of deaths among the wounded. In the last war, 6 per cent of Army wounded died through 1919; 7.35 per cent of Navy wounded; 12 per cent of Marines. So far in this war, the percentage of deaths from wounds in the three services are Army, 3.5; Navy, 3.16; Marines, 3.15.

The reasons behind these encouraging figures are three: blood plasma, the sulfa drugs, and greater mobility and better organization of medical units. And they point one obvious moral that is worth repeating: the armed services will need an increasing amount of plasma till victory, and we civilians can make no more valuable contribution than the filling of that need.

Youthful Manpower

Three years ago Russia saw a manpower shortage in its industries developing, and did something about it. Schools for labor reserves were opened, in which boys (and later, girls) from 14 to 17 could take two-year courses of training for skilled jobs in industry and transportation, and six-months courses for unskilled jobs. The youngsters were given special uniforms and insignia, and received state support throughout their training.

Since then 1,300,000 young workers have graduated to adult jobs. Many more have gone into the Army, where their new-learned skills are valuable. And the apprentices have turned out thousands of guns, shells, tools and airplane parts while they were learning. Trade schools had to be evacuated along with much industry, early in the war, but the program continued.

All of which would seem to indicate that when everybody pitches in, some very urgent problems can be licked—even when the enemy is battering at the front door.

There are plenty of ways of using your Christmas savings money—one of the best being to put part of it into war bonds.

just unhappy and—" he caught himself up, as if he felt he were about to betray a confidence.

"She's told you about Drew Warner?"

"Yes, I'd like to wring his neck!" "It wouldn't further your cause," said Emily gently.

"I suppose not, but he must be a damned scoundrel."

Emily asked after a minute, "You're terribly in love with her, aren't you?"

He turned so that he faced her. He said:

"I'm damned if I know. I know this is according to the books . . . when I'm with her, yes, I suppose I am. But— Oh, I suppose it's partly the way Nancy talks. How she couldn't bear being married to a doctor—my sort of doctor—"

"Then you have asked her to marry you?" Emily said, slowly.

"No. But—well, last night she said that she was sure I could make a go of things if I went back to Boston and tried to get a job as an assistant to someone with a name . . . and then eventually, specialization—"

"She's just warning me, that's all." "I can't advise you," said Emily.

He said, "The trouble is, I don't trust her. Don't misunderstand me. Part of the time I think she's fine and serious and gentle under that crazy, flibbertigibbet exterior. I know she can't be as hard and unkind as she pretends to be. The rest of the time I wonder if I'm making a fool of myself. You," he said, "you could tell me."

"Could she? Should she say, 'You're right, under the veneer she's alive and sensitive and sweet?' Or should she say nothing, and let him believe . . . ? If he really believed that there was nothing more to Nancy but the surface, the physical attraction, if he were convinced that her roots were shallow, and her easy cynicism a true part of her, he would be cured. He was, she thought unhappily, a sentimentalist, like most men.

If she—let him be cured, and she could do so without a disloyal word, might he not turn to her after a time for sympathy and understanding, and if he did turn to her . . ."

News Behind THE NEWS

Washington — The new White plan for an international bank and the Keynes and White plans for international currency stabilization are being hailed as forerunners of the better financial world we are to come into after the war.

Actually, they do not even approach the real depth and scope of the seemingly insoluble problems of trade and finance to be faced.

An international bank and currency stabilization by agreement are only mechanical facilities. They provide only a necessary financial bookkeeping house. They do not make business or run business any more than a local bank makes business of a local community.

The real problem is wholly different. Supposedly we are to lend billions to help rehabilitate the world and hoping to expand our markets abroad, and, at the same time, collect from Russia and our allies money or material under the lend-lease arrangement.

If we follow this course on the road which prevailing public thinking is taking us, we will merely repeat the foolish policies we followed after the last war.

Then we loaned money abroad in similar endeavors, and the international bankers sold bonds to the public to finance foreign ventures on the theory that such action would expand our foreign trade. The bonds later fell to practically nothing, because the foreign nations could not pay and the public took the loss.

This time, the only difference in these proposals seems to be that the treasury will be the international banker and the losses—which are unavoidable—will be taken out of the public purse directly.

The only way nations can really pay us is by shipping us goods. As long as we continue to lend them the money to buy from us, they can only continue to pile up debts in this country, whether held by the public in the form of bonds or by the treasury.

No international bank or currency stabilization agreement can alter the fact that we propose to go on selling more goods abroad than we buy and paying for this excess out of our own pockets by taking debts. The debts can never be paid until we take the goods, and as there is no likelihood of us ever accepting such a vast excess of imports, the debts actually can never be paid.

What is proposed now thus is to perpetuate the unbalance of our trade by taking on more debts than can ever be paid. While officials, in their zeal for improving the world, may not like to look the situation straight in the face like this, it is nevertheless true, in my opinion.

What to do about it? I do not know. I can merely see that it is wrong.

Certainly this country is not going to stand for a free influx of foreign goods, for instance low-priced Russian and Chinese goods, to any extent which would disturb wage and employment conditions in our industries.

Perhaps we can store some stockpiles of strategic materials for the future, materials which we do not have in this country, and which would aid rather than injure our industry, but we are certainly not going to take automobiles and steel for instance from Russia or Britain.

Some people think an arbitrary managed foreign trade policy—managed completely by the government—may be necessary, but this smacks of all the evils of dictatorship and totalitarianism.

Others think that, regardless of our recent popular hatred of tariffs and tariff walls, it may be necessary to go back to them to keep out competitive goods.

Obviously, a policy of negotiation of exchange of goods for goods would solve most of the difficulties, but that would heap more dirt on the gold we have buried down in Kentucky, making it less and less important.

Couple is Married in Ordnance Plant

East St. Louis, Ill., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Mrs. Dorothy L. Glatz of Collinsville and George R. Simpson of Belleville each worked the night shift in the Washington Park plant of the Walworth Company.

When they decided to marry, Mrs. Glatz took the suggestion of other girls in the factory and the ceremony was performed Saturday night during a 20-minute lunch period in the cafeteria.

Two hundred night shift employees ate lunches and watched as St. Clair County Judge Joseph E. Fleming, who operates the machine adjoining Simpson's, read the ceremony.

The couple was back at work today after a Sunday honeymoon.

Fair Enough by WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York.—A few weeks ago, Father Thomas E. Shortell, S. J., in some remarks under the auspices of the Institute of Public Relations of Holy Cross College, said that the sincerity of these dispatches, as they deal with criminality and other outrages in union practice, was subject to doubt because they ignore anti-social practices by some employers. I replied that it was immaterial whether the essays were sincere and that the allegations and the arguments alone should be considered. Father Shortell then sent me a long and courteous letter which he also released to the press, which in some cases published it. It is much too long for my space and I would surely be charged with unfair presentation if I were to try to condense it.

However, let us proceed. If it is fair to take me by the hand and lead me afield as Father Shortell would, then it is fair, also, for me to remind Father Shortell of a notable essay written by another Jesuit priest a few years ago, entitled Open Letter to a Catholic Politician Who Is an Un-Catholic Boss. The author is Father Daniel A. Lord, editor of the Queen's Work, published in St. Louis.

In his open letter, Father Lord referred to easily recognizable Catholic politicians who were obvious grafters, one a Hitlerian dictator, and betrayers of free government in the United States and told this composite crook that "the confessional is the place for the discussion of this thing called honest graft."

"It would seem," he wrote, "that there would be some necessity for restitution when a public official can have a magnificent country estate, a winter home in Florida, a fleet of motor cars, a Roxy chorus of house servants, an annual trip to Europe, and a bank account of something like a half-million dollars on a salary of less than $10,000 a year."

Along this line, I suggest to Father Shortell that a similar letter should be addressed by him to a hypothetical and composite Catholic union boss, inasmuch as the Catholic clergy, tardily and only after the Communists had made great headway among discouraged and bewildered workers, has recently been taking a strong part in union affairs by educating workers and union officials in their rights and duties and particularly in parliamentary procedure. This last is very important because the Communists school themselves in parliamentary tricks and learn to speak out in meeting and thus for a long time were able to tie the opposition into knots.

The opposition also were bashful and easily howled down by Communist minorities. The Catholic labor schools are trying to redress that serious disadvantage by educating the rank and file.

There are, among the powerful union bosses of the country, some Catholics who are just as pernicious in their field as Father Lord's composite political boss. In fact some of them are both union bosses

Funerals

Suburban—MRS. BERTHA KENDALL

The funeral of Mrs. Bertha Kendall, 65, former resident of Dixon, whose death at the Linton home in Sterling Friday afternoon was announced in Saturday's Telegraph, was held at 2:00 o'clock this afternoon at the Shirk funeral home in Milledgeville, the Rev. CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Thanksgiving" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Thursday, November 25.

The Golden Text was, "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me? . . . I will offer to thee the sacrifice of thanksgiving, and will call upon the name of the Lord" (Psalms 116:12, 17).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound in every good work: . . . Being enriched in every thing to all bountifulness, which causeth through us thanksgiving to God" (II Cor. 9:8, 11).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Christians rejoice in secret beauty and bounty . . . hidden from the world, but known to God. Self-forgetfulness, purity, and affection are constant prayers. Practice, not profession, understanding, not belief, gain the ear and right hand of omnipotence and they assuredly call down infinite blessings" (p. 15).

Mrs. Bovey, widow of the late Victor H. Bovey, was born Nov. 7, 1862 and had been a resident of Pine Creek township for many years. Surviving are two daughters, Miss Maude Bovey, at home, and Mrs. Raymond Baker of Mount Morris; one son, William of Chicago, and one brother, Edward Osbaugh of Wheat Ridge, Colo.

Deaths

Suburban—CARL R. MINSEL

Amboy, Nov. 29.—Carl Robert Minsel, for many years a prominent figure in the orchestral world, both in Germany and in the United States, passed away at St. Luke's hospital, Chicago, at 4:00 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Funeral services will be held at the Vaughan funeral chapel in Amboy at 10:00 o'clock Tuesday morning, with burial in Prairie Repose cemetery.

Mr. Minsel was born in Coblenz, Germany, June 7, 1871 and for years was a member of the Leipzig Philharmonic orchestra, which made a tour of the United States in 1900. After returning to Leipzig with his organization he accepted a position with the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra, later joining in the organization of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, under the direction of the famed conductor Emil Oberhofer, playing first French horn with that orchestra 19 years before joining the St. Louis Symphony orchestra under Rudolph Genz. He had lived in retirement in Harmon for a number of years.

He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Harry H. Shultz of Chicago, and a grandson, Robert Clark, who is with the 28th division, U. S. A., overseas.

Second Touchdown in Anderson's Life Defeats Notre Dame

Sailor's Quarterback Calls Play on Self to Upset Irish

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN
Chicago, Nov. 29—(AP)—Early in the season coach Tony Hinkle at Great Lakes was looking for passers.

He came to Ray Jones of Texas and Bus Warren of Tennessee and nodded gratefully. Then there was Steve Lach, the Duke running demon. The most passing he had ever done was in a poker game.

But maybe some day Jones and Warren might be hurt. So Lach became No. 3, or low man on the aerial totem pole. Sure enough, Jones was injured and so was Warren. Both were out at the same time. So Lach oiled his elbow joint with pretty good results, too.

At least his opponents thought him perplexing, not knowing whether he was going to run or toss. As a matter of fact, Lach didn't always know himself. The line wasn't holding any too well in those days and big Steve had lots of practice shaking off tacklers. He finally became adept at the art of sidestepping the stampede to pass. Or if he failed, he just ran. It was a kind of heads-he-does, tails-he-doesn't existence.

Finally Lach was curtailed by a leg injury Oct. 14 against Northwestern and was more or less rationed out thereafter.

Saturday he was taken off the shelf where he had been resting, his bad leg for two weeks. Notre Dame was to be given a look at him.

Two in Succession
He completed two passes in a row in the last seconds of the game—one for 15 yards, just a warm-up, and then another for 46 which hit Paul Anderson between the eyes for the touchdown that beat the Irish 19-14.

Quarterback Anderson also fits into the saga of the Sailors. He called the play on himself. Probably he didn't tell the boys in the huddle that only once before had he ever scored a touchdown. That was on a 50-yard runback of a pass interception, which highlighted his junior year at Western Reserve and gave him a page for his scrap book.

It is conceivable that Great Lakes, although being the first team to stop Notre Dame, may have to share the national service championship with the Iowa Seahawks. The Bluejackets have a record of 10 wins and two losses (at Purdue and Northwestern) for the season. The Seahawks, who played the Irish on even terms a week ago but were edged out on the scoreboard 14-13, concluded their campaign Saturday with nine victories by crushing Minnesota 32-0.

The Seahawks were held to a 6-0 lead at the half, but in the third quarter veteran Art Guepe, who wound up a great college career at Marquette in 1936, dashed 53 and 66 yards to score. The Seahawks topped a 90-yard drive in the final period with Ted Curran passing to John Clements for the last 25 yards. Shortly afterwards the Seahawks gained 30 more yards by air to set up a short plunge by sub Richard Kay.

Notre Dame's defeat left Purdue as the midwest's lone representative on the unbeaten-untied list.

Tribesmen Rescue 'Chutist From Tree
Gen. Stilwell's Hdqs. in India.—After a perilous parachute jump from a burning plane over a central Burma jungle of central Burma, Lt. Robert Martin of Portland, Oregon, made his way to safety with the help of tribesmen and now, after hospital treatment, is about ready to fly again. Martin, a 10th air force reconnaissance pilot, was on a mission to photograph rail centers and airfields when his plane caught fire. His foot caught in the chute and when it hit a tree it left him hanging head down.

"I fired my pistol five times," he said. "Luckily 10 tribesmen heard the shots and soon arrived. They shook the tree until I fell 25 feet into a thicket. My back felt like it was broken. Flames from the plane had burned away my shirt and my right forearm was burned, too."

Natives helped him to a British missionary hospital and from there he was taken to a United States army hospital, where he convalesced. He was awarded the air medal for "meritorious achievement, coolness, and courage" and the Purple Heart for his wounds.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
New York, Nov. 29—(AP)—Pigskin post-mortem: . . . And wasn't it a great day for the Navy? As this observer saw it, the difference between the Navy and Army teams was partly the greater size and strength of the Navy line (don't let those program weights fool you) and partly the kicking of a little guy named Hal Hamberg. . . . George Maxon got as much distance, but Hamberg paved the way for the first touchdown with a punt so close to the coffin corner that Glenn Davis stepped out of bounds as he took it on the seven yard line. Later after Jim Pettit intercepted an Army pass on his own 15—a clear case of petit larceny—Hamberg booted a 49-yarder out on the Army 23 and then put one out on the Cadets' one-yard line . . . that's why they still call it football.

SERVICE STRIPES
Back in 1901 admission to the Army-Navy game at Philadelphia was by invitation only and the anonymous author of the fine story of the service series in this year's program adds: "Between $40 and $50 was being offered for a seat" . . . That might be one way of observing the wartime tenure restriction. . . . Navy followers insist that a lot of the credit for Navy's team belongs to Johnny Wilson, who didn't even get his name in the program. Johnny, who once taught the Tar's coaching staff the uses of the "new" forward pass when he pitched for St. John's College in a scrimmage against the Midshipmen, has tutored the plebe teams for years and sends his boys up to the big squad ready to play with the men . . . Looks as if Doug Kenna would continue to be Army's "unknown soldier" for a while. He threw a few good passes Saturday, but the only time he ran with the ball was once when he couldn't locate a receiver.

Wonder if there was anything subtle in out fitting the "navy" cheering section with white hats. That kind of headgear also was worn by the MP's directing traffic . . . The unlucky regiment did all right with Navy yells and songs before the game and even surprised their rivals by uncovering banners reading: "Beat Army" and "Get 'em Goated," but when Bob Jenkins crashed over with the first touchdown, a few dozen real Navy supporters in the next section made more noise than 1,200 Cadets.

The kitchen of tomorrow, says a houseware designer, will be mostly glass or some glass-like substance. Meat in the oven will be visible through transparent panels, as will foods in the refrigerator. Mixers, toasters, and other tools will be built into the walls, so that they will be out of the way. Most of the work for a meal will be done while sitting down. It will make eating at home easy and interesting.

Bowling Bits

By "FRIDAY"
At the Recreation alleys tonight the Ladies' league takes the drives with Phillips, heading the loop with 23 wins and 10 losses, meeting Coca Cola; second place Treins, (22-11) rolls Reynolds Wirettes; Frazier (21-12), meets Villiger Drugs and Roberts and Hess, tied with Frazier, takes on Eichler Bros.

In a match game at the Recreation over the week end a Dixon women's team took it on the chin from another women's team, Kable Colts, by 188 pins, 2452 to 2264. Garkey rolled 517 for the Colts with Glatfely also having 513, and Phyllis Carson had 482 for the local lassies.

Another mixed doubles will be rolled Friday evening at the Recreation, with bowling following the Major league, and as usual you pick your own partner.

The match game between Peter Piper's Town House squad and Myers Royal Blue five, which was to have been bowled Sunday afternoon, was called off due to the fact that Eldon Myers was in Chicago making arrangements to join the merchant marine, which if it materializes will take another of Dixon's well-liked bowlers into service for his Uncle Sam.

Lytle Melvin, Eddie Hill and Wayne Williams of the Hill Bros. outfit were getting a little practice Sunday night and Lyle came up with the 8-10 split, which he made for the first time in his life, and probably the last, too.

Perhaps you are unable to buy any more War Bonds or Stamps, but if you have Tuesday night free you may help the war effort by giving some of your time. Captain John Cahill informs us Co. A needs new recruits, any man between 18 and 55 is eligible and in this way you may do your bit for Uncle Sam. Drilling is on Tuesday night from 7:30 to 9:00 and to the younger men who may later be called into service the basic training will be a big help when they join the regular forces. The Armory is also open on Friday night to members of Co. A, and they may improve their shooting eye on the range. Think it over.

The high ten bowlers in the Ladies' league are about the same as last week, except there has been some shuffling around among the girls. They now line up as follows:

Player	Score
Helen Klein	163
Amanda Smith	156
Phyllis Carson	154
Adeline Myers	153
Eileen Means	153
Pearl Detweiler	152
Jane Fischer	152
Lucille Poole	150
M. Meinke	150
L. Legore	148

The Doghouse is unchanged from Saturday with no new names added, but you may look it over and decide who you want to replace in the coming week:

Pressure Is Now On Redskins and Their Pass Master Baugh

Chicago, Nov. 29—(AP)—From here on the pressure is on the Washington Redskins and their pass-master, Sammy Baugh.

While the Chicago Bears ended their regular National Football League season yesterday by smashing the Chicago Cardinals 35-24 to clinch the Western Division title, the Redskins lost their first league game, to Phil-Pitt 27-14. Washington thus must win at least one of its final two games, both with the New York Giants, to capture the eastern crown and to gain entrance to the National Championship playoff against the Bears in Wrigley Field Dec. 19.

In the meantime, Baugh will have to pass as never before if he wishes to beat Sid Luckman's two all-time aerial marks set yesterday. The Bears' trigger-man completed 10 passes for 241 yards against the Cardinals, running his gain to 2194, and also hooked up four touchdown tosses, boosting his total to 28.

These accomplishments bettered the two seasonal records posted by Cecil Isbell last year—2021 yards gained and 24 touchdown passes.

Besides the Redskins' game at New York Sunday, Green Bay and Phil-Pitt will close their season together at Philadelphia.

The Bears rallied for three touchdowns in the last period, Bronko Nagurski plunging over for one yard and Luckman slinging 25 yards to Harry Clark and then 10 yards to George Wilson. . . . Nagurski returning to his old role as fullback after being used at tackle this season, contributed 85 yards on 16 trips with the ball.

In the other league game, New York beat Brooklyn, 24-7.

(By The Associated Press)
It doesn't look as though the Montreal Canadiens will tie or break the National Hockey League record of going undefeated in 23 consecutive games set three years ago by the Boston Bruins.

So far the Canadiens have gone through 12 games in a row without finishing on the short end of the score, but a tipoff perhaps that the end of their streak is near came last night when the last place New York Rangers held them to a 2-2 tie.

The Chicago Blackhaws took over second place by edging Boston, 5 to 4, before 16,649 at Chicago in a wild game marked by a 21-minute second period because of difficulty with the time clock. One of two goals by Clint Smith came what amounted to borrowed time.

A turnout of 13,806 at Detroit saw the Red Wings put on a third period outburst to beat the Toronto Maple Leafs, 6 to 4.

FATALLY BURNED
Mt. Carmel, Ill., Nov. 29—(AP)—William Dale Swafford, 17, a Carmi oil field worker, was burned fatally in an oil tank explosion Saturday on the Wheaties lease five miles northwest.

He died Sunday in a Princeton, Ind., hospital.

—If you have anything whatsoever to sell, put a "for sale" ad in The Dixon Telegraph.

Jim Biggert is worrying, as he finds he only has to raise his average one pin to get in the high ten on Friday nights, and if he gets in Mrs. Biggert has promised that if he gets in the Doghouse he'll not have anything but dog biscuits for the first day of his sojourn—an unhappy outlook for Jim.

Hitler Tells People How to Write Wills

Berne, Switzerland, Nov. 29—(AP)—Adolf Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter has counseled the people of Berlin, whose streets were burning from allied air raids, how to write their last will and testament.

Transocean, German news agency, reported the personnel section of the Wilhelmstrasse, where the German Aryan records are kept, was destroyed by fire.

Dine on Elephant, Zebra
Stockholm, Sweden, Nov. 29—(AP)—Zebra and elephant meat were restaurant delicacies served to bombed Berliners, Christer Jaederlund, Berlin correspondent for the Stockholm Tidningen, reported when he returned from the reich capital. He said the meat was obtained when soldiers shot animals which escaped from the zoo during the cascade of bombs.

Confirming the scarcity of water in Berlin, he said the people were going unshowered and unshaved.

Kin Hubbard, author of the Abe Martin sayings which were widely printed in newspapers in his lifetime, is regarded today as perhaps the most skillful arranger of words that ever lived.

The art in humorous paraphrasing is to slowly unfold a sentence, allowing each word to contribute its bit to the final wallop.

In his book, Horse Sense in American Humor, Walter Blair offers this Abe Martin saying as an example of the perfect technique:

"Uncle Mort Hickman, nearly ninety-eight, after cuttin' and splittin' four cords of wood yesterday afternoon, wuz found

Picked Pilots of
RAF Work Months
Before Dam Bombing

Story Behind Destruction of Ruhr Valley Dams is Revealed

Boston, Nov. 29 — (AP) — The breaching of the Ruhr valley dams by the RAF last May is history; now comes the story behind that blow—the months of preparation, experiments that failed, the production of the "missile" that unleashed the torrents, precision flying and the infinite patience of a quiet, painstaking scientist and Britain's most experienced bomber pilot.

The story is told in the December Atlantic Monthly by Wing Commander Guy P. Gibson, who trained the men who "probably knew more about the art of bombing than any other squadron in the world", and led the attack. Gibson, the most decorated man in the British army, received the Victoria Cross for the exploit.

He had been scheduled to go on leave when he was ordered to form a squadron of the best crews in the bomber command to carry out "the most damaging blow of the war". When he got his squadron together—25 crews, which meant 175 men—he told them: "You're here as a crack squadron. What the target is, I cannot tell you. All I can tell you is you will have to practice low flying all day and all night until you know how to do it with your eyes shut."

Security measures were taken, telephone wires were tapped. Guards were stationed everywhere in the vicinity and the barmaid in the local pub was given three months' holiday.

Scientist Not Named
Gibson went to London to meet the scientist, whose name is not disclosed—"one of the real back-room boys of whom little can be told until after the war". The scientist gave Gibson a lecture on damology, the art of breaking down dams.

"Now you may think me a stupid old man", he said, "but wait until I tell you what I know about the Mohme dam. It is a military objective which I have been studying ever since the war began. This dam is some 850 yards long, 150 feet thick, and it is as high as it is thick."

The scientist went on to explain that experiments with explosives on such walls had been going on for some time and that now a dam, some 200 feet across, had been built "in the south" and that certain theories, evolved with smaller models, would be tried out there. The experiment proved a success, but the scientist was not convinced.

Another dam in the midlands was selected and, on one cold winter morning after another, Gibson flew over this dam and dropped his "missile". The scientist stood on the edge of the lake, but one after another the experiments failed.

Finally One Works
"Then suddenly one morning in April, on one of the first days of spring, I flew over and dropped one which worked", Gibson relates. "The man on the ground danced and waved his hands in the air."

"Then there were urgent telephone calls, and many signals written in cipher, and messengers rushing to and fro, and factories receiving priority orders so that men and women worked throughout the day and the night

Meet Your Carrier

Between his school work, hobbies, and Telegraph carrier salesman route No. 19 Paul Fry is one of Dixon's busiest young men.

Paul is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fry, 210 W. Third St., and has been a member of this newspaper staff for the past 15 months. He is a seventh grader at St. Mary's, on the south side of the city, and is already looking forward to attending a university after completing his course at Dixon High.

Paul, who distributes his 113 papers in less than one-half hour each evening, divides his earnings between war bonds, savings account, clothes, and school equipment. He also finances his hobbies of model boat construction, and his display is one of the finest in the city. He has a variety of ships, including PT boats, destroyers, and battle ships. He is also intensely interested in chemistry.

Football is his favorite athletic sport; however, he enjoys basketball and soft ball. His father, Paul Fry, is well known in the Dixon area, being laboratory technician for Dr. David Murphy.

Paul's route covers the 700, 800, 1000, and 1100 blocks on W. 3rd st.—the 300, 400, and 500 blocks on Van Buren—1000, 1100, 1200, and 1300 on W. 4th St.—the 1100 and 1200 blocks on W. 6th—and the 400 and 500 blocks on Jackson. He finishes up in the 300 block on College. Paul's phone number is B-307.

making these things which we were to carry with us over to Germany to be dropped in the Mohme lake". "These things" and "missiles" are as close as Gibson comes to describing the explosive device used to blast the dams.)

Night and day the squadron flew low-level, up and down lakes in Scotland, the Midlands and in Wales. One of the hardest problems, Gibson says, was to "fly at exactly 45 feet, not 44 feet or 46 feet, but 45 feet" over the water. He goes on:

"Perhaps I ought to tell you here that it was obvious that our missiles would have to be dropped with extreme accuracy within literally a matter of feet of a certain spot. And it was necessary also to fly fast; otherwise the operation became too hazardous to allow for the possibility of success."

Accuracy Attained
"All these things we could do except the business of maintaining an exact height. But this difficulty was ultimately overcome in a most simple manner and, although I should like to tell you how it was done, I think that the Germans would like to know even better. The method we used was accurate to a few inches."

After two months of continuous hard training, involving 150 hours of flying for each person, Gibson considered his squadron fit to undertake the mission.

Meanwhile, reconnaissance planes were flying over Germany watching the dams "as a cat watches a mouse". They observed the density of the defenses and the height of the lake level, waiting for the right amount of water to exert the greatest pressure against the wall.

Everything Ready
On May 16, reconnaissance planes reported everything just right for the attack. Crews reported to the briefing room immediately. Gibson left the scientist tell them about it "in his gentle, benign way".

"Soon it was time to take off, and we rumbled out onto the flare path in one great formation, and soon all 19 of us were en route to Germany at zero altitude."

One aircraft hit the sea, lost both outboard engines and flew back on the inboard two. Two others were hit by flak and ordered to return to base. That left 16 aircraft, 112 men. They continued into the Ruhr, fought past Hamm and came over the hill above the Mohme lake.

"I spoke to my squadron: 'O. K., chaps. Come in to attack when I tell you. I'll attack first.' x x x

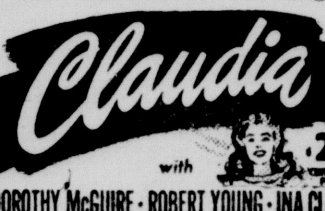

"As the last aircraft attacked and as I watched the mines drop in exactly the right place, a great column of whiteness rose up a thousand feet into the air and the dam wall collapsed."

"Then I felt a little remote and unreal sitting up there in the warm cockpit of my Lancaster, watching this mighty power which we had unleashed; and then I felt glad because I knew that this was the heart of Germany and the heart of her industries, the place which itself had unleashed so much misery upon the whole world."
